Vandals steal elves

Flowers wrecked, planters stolen and homeowner unhappy

by SHERYL LOUCKS

The little white house, surrounded by a neatly painted picket fence, with cheery tulips beginning to open in the front garden is the pride and joy of Kathy and Ron Roberts or would be if it were not for the vandals.

The couple have lived in the
"Roberts Roost" on Newcastle Street for 12 years, largely without problems but in the last few years the biggest pest in their garden is a two legged variety with mischievous hands and their does not seem to be a pesticide on the market to get rid of them.

"It started with a hubcap. I'd been in an accident and it was leaning against the step. And someone took it. Then it was bulbs from the Christmas light string on the fence," says Kathy.

Next planters sitting on either side of their front gate were stolen. The couple replaced them, this time screwing them down to cement pads. The vandals stole one anyway and dumped the other.

Kathy says the most annoying thing was just when her planters were full of beautiful blooming geraniums someone picked all the flowers out of the middle of them.

What has really pushed the Roberts too far has been the theft on May 13 sometime between six and nine p.m. of two garden elves or gnomes.

"One had been outside for a few years by the tree and no one bothered it but when we moved them to the front step, I guess it caught someone's attention," says Ron.

Kathy says the first gnome that had already been outside had been a birthday present for her husband, the second was a recent gift from her mother, who had purchased it in Florida for the couple.

The two gnomes survived outside on the step right in front of their door for all of three days before vanishing.

A neighbour also reported her handmade sign with the family name on had also been taken.

"What would you do with a handmade sign with someone's name on it?" says Kathy.

She has seen the flowers wrecked at the church, post office and downtown. The police have not been any help.

"I can understand the police perspective. What can they really do?" asks Ron. "It's not that what's been stolen is worth a lot

Stopped paying taxes in Minden Hills?

Tax collectors could be soon knocking on doors of residents to collect more than $500,000 of unpaid property taxes.

At last week's Minden Hills
finance committee meeting, Treasurer Mary Jane Irwin revealed a list of arrears owed to Minden Hills, mostly from people who have neglected to pay their taxes. Irwin estimated the amount owing to the municipality to be in the ball park of half a million dollars.

"It's quite clear there is a great deal of unsolicited taxes out there," said Councillor Peter Oyler. "It's my belief that the township has to take a course of action on this to collected the money."

of money, it's just a hassle."

Kathy says what disturbs her is how the problem started with planters just outside of her fenced yard and has now reached the front door.

"That's getting kind of nervy, taking them off the front step," says Kathy.

It begs the question of how far will these vandals or thieves go next?

"Add a P.S. We would like our gnomes returned and there would be no retribution, we just want them back," says Kathy.

Editor's note: Kathy Roberts also wrote a letter to the Times. Due to space limitations, it will appear next week.

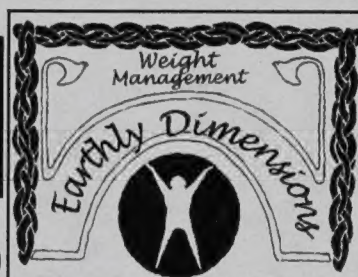

Kathy Roberts points to cement pads where, last week, two gnomes stood proudly welcoming anyone to the front door of her home. They have since been stolen.

by JERRY GROZELLE
Special to The Times

"Has anyone here experienced a scam?" asked Ontario Provincial Police Constable Laura Ostler, at the Stanhope Seniors' Social Club lunch meeting on May 13.

A few of the 80-plus people in attendance raised their hands. Fortunately, none of the people were victims of a scam, or at least none would admit being a victim. Several had received suspicious calls but refused to go along with the caller's wishes. One said a caller on the telephone asked all kinds of questions and then asked about the intended victim's financial status. That line of questioning raised a red flag and the intended victim terminated the conversation.

Ostler was the guest speaker at the meeting and her subject was scams that most often target seniors.

Ostler said these scam artists are professionals who use techniques to gain the victim's confidence. An estimated $40-million has been lost to various scams since 1995. "Seniors lost about 80 per cent of that amount," Ostler told the group. Seniors are targeted because they are more likely to have savings and they are at home during the day to take calls.

Ostler explained that there are many legitimate telemarketers and offered a few tips, supported by a 15-minute video, on how to distinguish a scam from an honest sales pitch.

She said there have been numerous scams where the victim is called on the phone and told he or she has won a big prize — often a car, a boat or even cash. The victim is asked to send money to cover taxes, shipping or some other cost.

"We'd all like to get something free," Ostler said. "But you should never have to pay for something that's free."

Individuals have lost $10,000 or more to such scams.

The prize scams are getting old, Ostler explained, and new ways of separating people from their savings are being developed all the time. After the September 11 terrorist attacks in the U.S. scam artists used the tragedy to their advantage, setting up schemes purporting to be raising funds for victims of the attack. They have neither scruples nor consciences.

People who have fallen victim are likely to be contacted by other scam artists. Their names and personal information are put on lists, called sucker lists, and sold to others who are eager to exploit them. In some cases, the second generation scammer will pose as a police officer, telling the victim that his or her money has been recovered and, for a fee, the recovered money can be released.

"The objective of these people," as pointed out in a video Ostler provided for the meeting, "is to steal as much of your money as quickly as possible."

Victims of this type of fraud are sometimes too embarrassed to report the loss, thinking that they will be viewed as gullible, or worse, incapable of looking after their own finances.

Ostler noted that by reporting such fraudulent activities, victims may be able to help put the culprits out of business and save someone else from suffering the same type of loss.

Telephone scams are not the only method of defrauding people from their OPP Constable Laura Ostler was the guest speaker at the Stanhope Seniors Social Club lunch meeting last Tuesday. The subject was fraud and what potential victims should consider before agreeing to part with their money.

money. Ostler said there was a scam where people went door-to-door taking deposits on a driveway sealing service. The deposit cheques were cashed and the sales people or the driveway sealing company were never seen again.

Another scam that Ostler talked about was a scratch and win scheme, tied to Valentine's Day, that was sent out in the mail. Instructions on the ticket stated that if you scratched two of the areas of the ticket and the prizes matched, you were a winner. She said she scratched all of the areas and they were all the same. In that scheme, everybody was a winner/victim.

Club members were cautioned to watch for "triggers" that should immediately send up a red flag when a telephone caller or door-to-door salesperson tries to sell or "give" you something. They include: The caller is more excited about the "win" than you are; It sounds too good to be true; You must pay some up-front fee to receive your prize; You must give the caller your private financial information; You are asked for cash to complete the transaction; The caller claims to be a bank manager or other official and wants you to participate in a sting to uncover some illegal activities; The stranger calling wants to become your best friend; It is a time limited opportunity that you must seize immediately or you will miss out.

There are a number of signs that suggest a friend or relative may have been or is continuing to be the victim of a scam. They include: a marked increase in the amount of mail with too-good-to-be-true offers; frequent calls offering get rich quick schemes or valuable awards; numerous calls asking for donations to unfamiliar charities; sudden inability to pay normal bills; requests for loans or cash; banking records that show cheques or withdrawals made to unfamiliar companies; secretive behavior regarding phone calls.

It was stressed that family members and friends should not be critical of victims. "It's not their fault," Ostler said.

The members of the Stanhope Seniors' Social Club were advised to contact a trusted friend, lawyer, banker or police officer if they had any doubt about a caller or door-to-door salesperson. They were cautioned to never give out bank account or credit card information to anyone they don't know.

Ostler said if someone calls asking for a donation, get a call-back number. "Legitimate charities have nothing to hide," she said. "If you want to help a charity and you are unsure about a caller, deal with the charity directly."

Ostler pointed out that scam artists can use legitimate businesses and services such as courier companies and Canada Post. Just because the solicitation came in the mail or a caller says a courier company will pick up your money doesn't mean it is a legitimate venture.

A program called PhoneBusters is operated by the Ontario Provincial Police in co-operation with several partners. A toll-free telephone number has been set up (1-888-495-8501) to report any suspicious calls. SeniorBusters is a volunteer group which works with PhoneBusters to provide telephone support and information to seniors who have become victims of crime. SeniorBusters can be reached at the same toll-free telephone number. For those who are on-line, the website is: <http://www.phonebusters.com> or the e-mail address is phonebusters@efni.com.

The video that Ostler showed at the meeting is an excellent source of information. Organizations can obtain an education package from PhoneBusters, which includes the video and brochures by calling the toll-free number.

money will start the process. Irwin said the township will likely provide one-year leeway for all outstanding taxes, including the solicitor fee. There is also a penalty of 1.25 per cent for every month taxes are not paid.

The next step will see the township taking possession of certain properties.

The list of over 100 names of property owners was not made public, but one individual has failed to pay municipal taxes for the past nine years, said Councillor Ron Buchanan.

Before amalgamation certain townships did better jobs of collecting tax money, Irwin said, not willing to point fingers. She said the township will notify people who owe more than four years of taxes to Minden Hills and then go from there.

"Even those names will be very time consuming," Irwin said. "We might even have to hire another staff member to deal with some of these."

All of the councillors said they were surprised by the numbers.

"These numbers are substantial," Oyler said.

The finance committee will discuss the arrears further next month.

Temperature's rising at HHSS

HHSS technical theatre students Meghan Kernohan and Kristin Teevens are painting the set for Fahrenheit 451, "a futuristic science fiction suspense thriller set in a time when books are burned and tv screens take up entire walls." Adapted from the book by Ray Bradbury, Fahrenheit 451 focuses on Montag, a fireman whose job it is to set fire to houses where books are found. He starts to question his profession when two things happen: he meets a girl (of course), and he sets fire to a house even though the woman who owns it refuses to leave. She'd rather die than live without books. So what is it that makes books so important — and feared? The HHSS production runs June 1, 2, 3, and 4 at the Northern Lights Pavilion in Haliburton, starting at 7 p.m.. Tickets are $5 each and are available at Cranberry Cottage, 457-1844, or at the door. Doors closed at Carnarvon Lumber

by ALLISON TAYLOR
Times staff

Apparently mum's the word at Carnarvon Lumber and Building Supplies last week after the doors were closed and locked indefinitely.

Starting at 7:30 a.m. on Friday, customers were faced with dimmed lights and a posted sign on the Carnarvon showroom store that read, 'May 17, store is closed.'

"I heard they were having problems," said one regular local customer, who wished to remain anonymous.

Four or five cars pulled up to the door, read the sign and walked away in the span of 30 minutes. None of them had any comments, but all were curious if the store would re-open.

Next door to the empty showroom, the office was a little more active with one or two employees. Store owner Rick Bailey, who was in the store Friday morning, did not want to make any comment, but said the company had been struggling in the past few months.

"It's been a tough morning and I do not have any comment at this time," he said on the phone from his home.

There are an estimated 20 to 25 employees at Carnarvon Lumber, but no one would confirm that number.

It is not known how long the store will be closed, or if it will re-open.

OPP after aggressive drivers

Aggressive drivers beware – the OPP is looking for you.

From now until the end of May, the OPP will be targeting aggressive drivers with a zero tolerance policy.

Aggressive driving includes speeding, following too closely (tailgating), unsafe lane changes, improper signaling and disobeying traffic controls, including red light and stop sign running.

"We will focus on locations with high numbers of crashes, complaints or congestion," said Traffic Sergeant Chris Whaley of the Field and Traffic Support Bureau. "This campaign is important because aggressive drivers don't see themselves as a problem. That's what contributes to them being aggressive. They blame everyone else."

Aggressive driving is not normal or acceptable behaviour and the OPP plans to make that clear with the two-week campaign.

A press release issued from the OPP General Headquarters states: "If this sounds like you, consider this your warning. Motor vehicle collisions are avoidable. They are caused by the actions we take and the way we drive. The OPP wants your help in making the roads safe. Obey the rules of the road, expect delays so you can plan ahead and report aggressive drivers. Let's all do our part."

The campaign got underway on Saturday.

Walker goes beyond the call of duty

by JERRY GROZELLE
Times staff

Paul Walker of Minden received a special award from the Rotary Club of Minden. It recognizes him for going "beyond the call of duty performance on the job and outstanding customer service."

The award was initiated three years ago by Dr. John Kerr, who was the president of the club at that time.

Bill Valentine nominated Walker for the award. "I've known Paul since he went to the first little old five-member Home Hardware on the main street and he's one terrific guy," Valentine said.

Quoting the letter he sent to the Minden Rotary Club, Valentine said, "I wish to nominate Paul Walker for your Workplace Pride Award. He has been an employee of Minden Home Hardware for as long as I can remember.

He is always polite, helpful and full of the knowledge the customer needs. If your water pump quits on a Sunday or late evening, Paul can get you what you need with no complaints. If I were hiring for a business, Paul would be employee number one."

The award was presented at a special ceremony officiated by President Jeanne Anthon at the May 13 meeting at the Wagon Wheel Restaurant. Anthon asked the audience for any anecdotes they might share about the award recipient.

Rotarian Bill Roszell related an experience from about 20 years ago when he went to Home Hardware to purchase a barbecue. Being accustomed to the service he usually received in the city, he was pleasantly surprised when, after he had made his selection, Paul asked him when he would like it delivered. "That was the first shock," Roszell recounted. "I said, 'well, when can you deliver it,' and he said, 'we will have to put it together, so I guess we probably won't be able to get it there until about 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Would that be soon enough?'"

"If your water pump quits on a Sunday or late evening, Paul can get you what you need with no complaints."

BILL VALENTINE

"I didn't know Paul at that time, but I still remember that service-oriented attitude. Whether that was generated through the Pentneys (owners of the Minden Home Hardware store) or Paul himself, I don't know. But I've never forgotten."

"I hope you come back and see us again when you need another one," Walker said, to a chorus of laughs.

John Kerr added his congratulations. "I go to Home Hardware at least once a day," he said, "and as John (Pentney) knows, their employees are all very public relations oriented and very knowledgeable. However, when I need a little extra advice, I wait until Paul is not busy - he's always very busy, because he's so tall everyone can see him - to get that special treatment. So, thank you Paul."

Geoff Robinson, a guest at the event, has been a member of the Haliburton County Fair Board for more than 20 years, serving in various positions, including president. He noted that Walker is the current president of the Fair Board.

Robinson said Walker has served on numerous committees of the Fair Board over the past several years. "He has worked his way up to president," Robinson said. "I understand this will be his last year as president. I hope he intends to stay on the board, we certainly need volunteers."

Walker assured Robinson that he would continue to help.

As Chair of the Timbersport committee, Ted Anthon noted that Walker, as president of the Fair Board, has been very helpful with the move of the Timbersport championships from Minden's Main Street to the fairgrounds. "Whenever we had a problem, Paul had the solution," Anthon said. "Everything that seemed to be a problem, he said 'we'll look after that'. So, not only when he's working for Home Hardware, but when he's working for the community, he's a super guy."

Walker said he was accepting the award on behalf of all the Home Hardware staff members.

With the award, $100 will go to the charity of Walker's choice.

School board cash strapped

by ALLISON TAYLOR
Times staff

The Trillium Lakelands District School Board is still strapped for cash, despite a recent injection of $350 million to Ontario Schools the provincial government announced last week.

"This is very frustrating and this is not good enough," says Rick Johnson, chair of the Trillium Lakelands board at a press conference held yesterday. "Realistically this money only covers inflation this year."

The funding increase equals approximately $100 per student currently enrolled in the school board. As far as textbooks are concerned, Johnson says the board will be able to buy half a textbook for each student next year.

Books and learning materials aren't the only area suffering from diminishing funding as far as the Trillium board is concerned. Right now the funding shortfall is conservatively estimated at $13,100,000 from areas including technology, transportation, salaries and benefits, special education and staff training, Johnson says, and the board is unclear where the money is supposed to come from.

"The money is being taken from everyday programs like transportation to and from school," he says.

Claiming the one-time increase to funding is inadequate, Johnson called upon the government to review the funding formula and to consider each Ontario school board on an individual basis.

Each school board receives funding based on student enrollment, or an equitable funding formula, and where there are decreases in enrollment, the funding takes a nose dive as well.

After having to close two schools because of falling enrollment, one in Dorset and another to be shut down in Gooderham, the board wants the government to realize the funding formula is not working.

"We have fixed costs that we have no control over," he says, "maybe the government should look at things we can't control and fund them directly."

Fixed costs include the cost of fuel to heat school buildings and to operate buses.

"The funding allows us to overcome shortfalls but not to add any more programs," says Trustee Bob Orr.

By identifying the six areas where financial assistance is most required, the board hopes to open the eyes of the Ontario government.

"It's not just about throwing money at the problem, it's identifying the needs of each board," he says.

Trustee Val Smith says the school system is not the way it used to be and that the system hasn't necessarily changed for the better.

As the funding continued to decrease since 1997 under the conservative government, the only left for the board "to re-jig is staffing," Johnson says, "the end result is a lower level of education."

Now that the government has placed education as a priority during the throne speech last week, the school board is hopeful the changes will come soon, but they aren't counting their chickens before they hatch.

"Children of the province are the most natural resource and we have to invest in their futures. Whatever you put in you have to get back," Johnson says.

Awards well deserved

A group of Haliburton Highlands Secondary School students added yet another honour to their collection last week when they were presented with Junior Heritage Awards. Nearly 40 HHSS students were among the 440 from across the province to earn the awards for their "significant contributions to cultural, natural or built heritage preservation."

The Ontario Heritage Foundation, a non-profit agency of the provincial government presents the awards. The students were nominated by the Municipality of Dysart in recognition of their efforts in several projects.

MPP and Minister of Municipal Affairs and housing Chris Hodgson presented the awards to the students with the assistance of Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey.

The restoration of the Drag River in Haliburton Village was a major contribution the students have made to the heritage of the village. The stream bed was cleaned and enhanced for walleye spawning and the banks of the river were stabilized and improved to prevent further siltation of the river bed. The area around the river also received a facelift that enhances the site for residents and visitors to enjoy. Native shrubs and trees have been planted along the river to restore the natural habitat.

The contribution these students have made, under the guidance of Dave Mowat, head of the Science Department, is invaluable. It not only improved the appearance of the river area of the village, it also enhanced the walleye fishery in the Lake Kashagawigamog chain of lakes. Studies of the near-shore fishery in Kashagawigamog - which are also conducted by the students - are showing a significant improvement in the fishery. That improvement will ultimately translate to economic benefits for Haliburton County.

The awards were well deserved.

Kudos are also in order to the Municipality of Dysart for recognizing the value of the students' efforts and nominating them for the awards. jg

Beware the scam artists

It's difficult to imagine anyone so devoid of conscience and filled with greed as to willfully defraud our parents and grandparents of their life savings. But, sadly, it happens all too often.

That point was made abundantly clear at the May 13 Stanhope Seniors Social Club meeting at the Stanhope Fire Hall Community Centre.

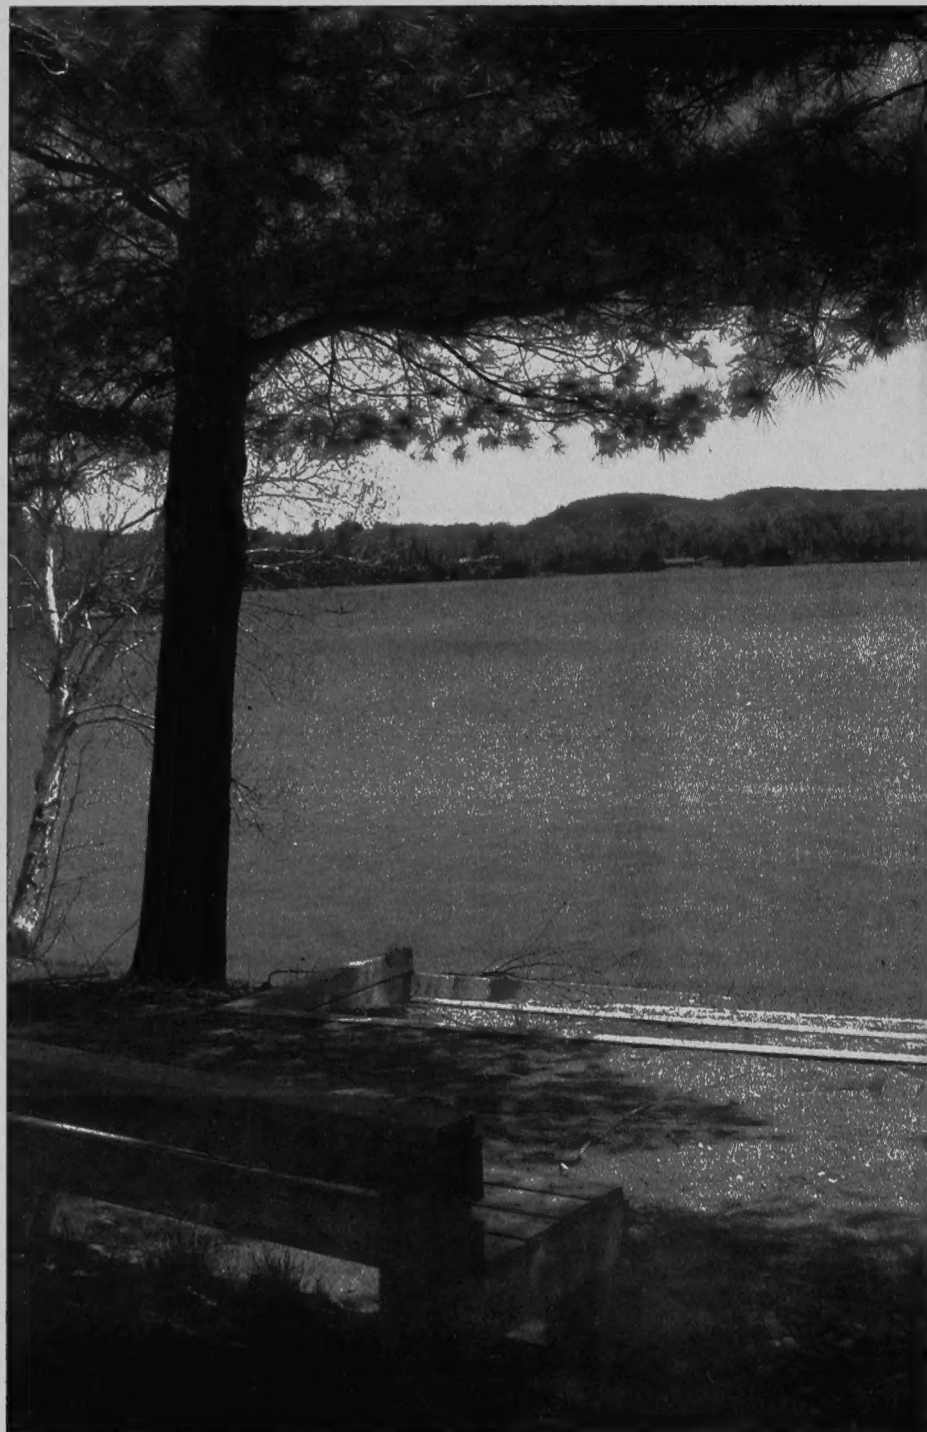

OPP Constable Laura Ostler made a presentation to the group of about 80 seniors, complete with a 15-minute video. Her presentation warned of the threat posed by scam artists who use the telephone or sometimes go door-to-door with the intent of separating seniors from their savings. Some of the different types of scams were outlined and Ostler presented some sobering figures on the amount of money that has been defrauded through various scams - an estimated $40-million since 1995, with 80 per cent of the victims being seniors.

Among the reasons seniors are the target of these parasites is because they usually have some savings and they are most likely to be home during the day to take calls. The scam artists also know that a certain percentage of their victims won't report their losses to police because they are embarrassed or they fear they might lose control of their assets because they may be deemed incompetent.

Scams include the caller who excitedly tells his victim that he or she has just won a fabulous prize and needs to send money to clear the prize through customs or scratch and win tickets sent through the mail where everybody is a winner/victim. Even invoices that look like they are legitimate bills for some kind of service, such as a web site or phone book listing, have made the rounds, earning the fraud artists big money and adding thousands of names to their "sucker lists."

The justice system takes fraud of this kind very seriously, but fines, loss of assets and short jail terms don't seem to be much of a deterrent. The scammers continue to dream up new ways of bilking money from anyone who is vulnerable.

The video would be recommended viewing for everyone, especially those who are vulnerable to this type of scam. jg

Everyone should recycle

To the Editor:

I'd like to know if all those people who have been singing the "civic pride" song lately know the verse about "civic responsibility." You want everyone to keep their yards neat and tidy, eh? Well, I want everyone to separate their stinky garbage and recycle.

A while ago, a whole lot of good citizens, who were interested in something more essential than their "property value," petitioned and pushed until our municipality started recycling programs at the local dump. Good! An incentive to reduce the fill going into the landfill site and provide recycled material for industry makes good economic sense; makes good environmental sense.

So the other day, we go to the dump, dutifully making our stops at the paper bin, the cans and bottles and plastics bin, the corrugated cardboard pile and last, but definitely least, the landfill' and there sitting at my feet was a big green garbage bag full of, among other things, newspaper and tin cans.

Hey, get with the program. If you are physically able to take your garbage to the dump, then you are probably physically able to sort it. Do you need a training seminar to teach you how?

Golly, I wonder why the landfill site is getting full? When it's time to buy more property for a new one maybe the non-recyclers should pay the bill. Along with all the parents out there who don't see the connection between their "civic responsibility" and washing diapers (don't let me get started on that one).

Happy reducing, re-using, recycling!

Joy Mann
Carnarvon

PS On second thought go ahead - get me started! I would love to see some letters from those dedicated young mothers who actually do wash diapers. "The few, the brave, the perpetually pooped."

IN OTHER WORDS

Columnists and Letters to the Editor

They call me Salsa

One of the real benefits of living in a small community comes from the fact that everybody knows you. I was never more aware of this than earlier this week when our trusty mail carrier delivered a newspaper to me that was wrongly addressed to Steve Salsa. My name wasn't the only thing that got screwed up on the label. The sender also spelled our mailing address wrong. In fact, the only thing they got right was our postal code. Yet, such is the efficiency of our small town postal service that the mail found me, its rightful owner, without delay. I, for one, am impressed.

And this is not an isolated incident either. You might know my good buddy, Tom, who lives in Coldwater. He once had a similar experience where he received his mail with minimum delay even though it was simply addressed to "Tom in Coldwater." Try sending a letter to Tom in Toronto and see how that works.

In any case, maybe this whole incident was some sort of cosmic message. You see, I've been living with the name Steve Salsa for a few days now and I've sort of grown attached to it. I mean it's got this sexy Latin ring to it that just might add a bit of zest to my life.

Listen hombres, I've lived as Steven Robert Galea for quite a while and so I don't think I'll change my name until I do something really, really stupid, which is another way of saying that this probably won't happen until I forget our next anniversary. If so, believe me, Steve Salsa, would be a serious contender and that's why I'm putting you all on notice.

You've got to admit, it is the sort of name that rolls off your tongue; the male equivalent of Charo. A man named Steve Salsa or Estaban Roberto Salsa, if we were to get real formal, could not help but be a good dancer, a lady's man and perhaps even someone who was handy with a rapier. The mark of S would be stylish enough, but the fact that I'd be capable of jumping off the saloon roof and landing squarely on the horse rather than the saddle horn would be the cheese on the taco. Swinging from a chandelier while escaping the Federales would soon become second nature; okay, I'll admit it's not like I've never done this before but this time I imagine that I'd probably remember the whole sordid incident.

Jes, that's cause Steve Salsa couldn't help but be cool. He'd know to say the right things at the right time with just the right accent. No doubt he'd be an expert bullfighter rather than merely a bull... oh, never mind. He'd play flamenco music and castanets would not be merely a fishing term anymore. No sir, Estaban Salsa would be the epitome of old world charm.

Of course, there would be sacrifices, mi amigos. I'd have to cultivate a neatly trimmed pencil moustache and buy one of those sleek black caballero hats. I might also have to learn an appreciation for the music of Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass and perhaps brush up on my Espanol. Really, it's a small price to pay for an image makeover such as this, no?

Carol says just the very fact that I've given it this much thought proves that I have far too much time on my hands. To which I say, "You interrupted my siesta just for this?" Yet even she will admit that the name suits me. In fact, she maintains that it's wholly appropriate for me to be named after a dip.

A hot spicy one, I remind her. A dip is a dip, she replies.

Ai Carumba!

BEYOND35

Steve Galea

Singing: Bad for your health?

Extraordinary how potent cheap music is.

Noel Coward

Sir Noel was bang on the money with that one. A simple jingle can be a cultural powerhouse. A song doesn't have to be well-sung or well-crafted to pack a punch. The lyrics to "Happy Birthday" are inane to the point of fatuity, but we've all sung it dozens of times, and enjoyed every performance. The song We Will Rock You could have been written by a tone-deaf 12-year-old, but fans never tire of roaring that anthem en masse at hockey games and soccer matches.

The power of even a mediocre song can be enormous. It can cheer us up or bum us out. It can inspire or infuriate us; fill us with joy or heartbreak.

Or even kill us.

You think I exaggerate? Tell it to the judge - the judge in Manila in the Philippines, who just got through sentencing another Filipino for murder. The defendant had been singing "My Way" in a Karaoke bar, much to the derision of another patron who laughed and jeered at his vocal stylings.

So the crooner pulled out a .38 Smith and Wesson and croaked him.

Hey, My Way is a treacly gobblet of sentimental goo even when Sinatra sings it. Nobody should have to hear it sung well, never mind badly. Perhaps it was really a mercy killing.

Bad music hath charms to sooth the most savage of breasts - and beasts.

Researchers at the National Sea Life Centre in Birmingham, England had a problem - ten sharks (five male, five female) which didn't want to play house. Try as they might they could not induce or entice the finny brutes to heed the call of nature and swim forth and multiply. Then they discovered Barry White.

Yes, that Barry White - the oleaginous, gold-chain-swaddled tune merchant whose gag-prompting ballads slimed up the music charts back in the sleazy Sixties. The researchers discovered that Barry White recordings, played underwater, nudged the sharks into behavior patterns that looked a lot like piscatorial foreplay.

A spokesman for the Centre said that the previously monk-like sharks "did seem a bit more excited, chasing one another around the tank" after hearing a couple of White CDs.

Well, I dunno. I believe if I was forced to listen to an endless tape loop of Barry White warbling "Can't Get Enough Of Your Love, Babe" and "You're The First, the Last, My Everything", I'd be thrashing around mindlessly and going berserk too. I don't think the Sea Life Centre has an outbreak of shark foreplay on its hands - I think it's a case of Aquarium Rage.

Paula Wolf could relate to that. Paula is a housewife in the town of Poppleton, in England.

ARTHURBLACK

Columnist

Correction: Paula used to be a housewife. She is now separated from her husband and seeking divorce. The reason? He refuses to stop imitating Roy Orbison. Four years ago, somebody convinced Dave Wolf that he sounded just like the American singer. Dave liked the idea so much he quit his job and went on the road as an Orbison impersonator.

"It just can't go on" Paula said. "I do like some of the songs, but it all got to be too much. He's more devoted to Roy than to me."

No need to explain, Paula. I'm surprised you didn't drive him up to Birmingham and push him into the shark tank. Bad music - or even mediocre music badly performed - can bring out the worst in anyone. Take my pal Eddie, the guy in the next office. He loves the theme song from The Titanic. Matter of fact, he's whistling it right now.

And has been for the past two hours.

Good old Eddie. Sounds like he's having the time of his life.

Which is good, because it's almost over.

Soldier says the hunt for terrorists must continue

To the Editor:

How are things in the Minden area? I guess by now the trees are starting to bud, the frogs are performing their nightly concerts and all around are the signs of spring.

God, you're all so lucky to be living in such a beautiful part of the world. I can almost smell the scent of pines in the air when I close my eyes.

I just got back to Kandahar from Pakistan. Given what happened a couple of weeks ago, I wasn't sure what to expect. As soon as I arrived in camp I went to check on my friends. As it turns out, they have all gone on a mission farther north and won't return from several more days. I was able to find out that it was their company that was involved and that they were all alright. My heart and prayers go out to those families who lost loved ones. I read an article about what happened and something quote from a Canadian bothered me. The article appeared in our Army newspaper but I was reading it inside the Canadian Field Hospital. When asked what she thought about the Canadian involvement in Afghanistan this lady (I forget where she is from) said, "I don't understand why Canadian troops are over there anyway. Canada was not attacked by terrorists."

I know her thoughts are in the minority but when moral is already low it's stuff like that just knows the wind out of your sails. We can never forget why we, the world, are in Afghanistan. Freedom was attacked, not any one country but our right to live without fear. Freedom must be defended no matter what the cost. Some people have paid the ultimate price but it is a price that we are all willing to pay to preserve freedom. Never forget that. I think that's the biggest surprise for these terrorists; we'll never stop hunting them until we have them. They do not know our resolve in this matter. I guess I should close for now. Thanks again for supporting freedom and the war on terrorism. Until next time, take care and

God Bless.

Dear Editor:

Brickbats, brickbats - no kudos. You've cut the historical photograph in last week's "what's happening in Haliburton." Definitely not nice!

For some of us former "city-ites" and others too young to remember they were a window to the past in this area.

I hope that the omission was temporary and that we will see them back again this week.

Making art come alive

STANHOPE LIFE

Pat McNinch
489-1881

Christine Carr works in her studio on the banks of the Kennis River, near Halls Lake. Here she coaxes iron and steel into graceful garden sculptures, ornaments and trellises. She has exhibited her work at various galleries and art shows in the Orillia area. As a guest artist at the Penetang Garden Show, she created huge, six foot tall, blue herons from steel and donated one of these to raise money for its museum. Before coming to Stanhope, Christine was also a co-operative member of the Zephyr Art Gallery in Orillia, where she displayed her paintings and metal art sculpture at showings every two or three months.

As a result of September 11th, Christine participated in a benefit held in October, 2001 to raise money for the New York Trade Center victims. The disastrous attack affected her deeply and she set out to design a single emblem incorporating the flags of Canada, Great Britain and the United States. "Despite our differences," she says, "these three countries are historically closely related and they immediately banded together as one in this tragic hour." Her remarkable graphic design is now evident on flags and T-shirts. Some of the profits from the sale of these items will go to another pet project; an orphanage in Guadalajara, Mexico. Major support for the orphanage will come from this year's 371 mile Pony Express Ride held September 13 in Utah. Christine hopes to participate by caring for the horses in the long ride and to have her own Arabian mare conditioned and ready for one of the 15 mile segments to be ridden by good friend Pastor Len Crow.

Christine believes that artists have as much responsibility as politicians as far as social consciousness is concerned.

"We take our art and wrap it around society's most important issues, like human rights," she says. "Art makes the statement and artists can make a difference." If her dream comes true, Christine will be able to go to Mexico to work and help the orphanage for a few months every year. "Then I guess I'll have made a difference, too."

Another favorite medium for the artist's creative energy is designing table cloths, place mats and floor cloths. She hand paints her own designs on canvas in oil and acrylic. Lacquer and wax are then applied to produce artwork which is both utilitarian and visually appealing. She says she did not realize how much she liked painting until she began to do the table cloths. "My painting became freer and more fluid. It was not as intimidating as the thought of having my paintings hung on walls," she says. One art director even wanted to take all the table cloths she had made for the Mezzaluna Cafe in Orillia and hang them for an art show. Christine likes to work with customers' suggestions and ideas, but the design is always ultimately her own.

Recently a dear friend, Brian Talbot, died in his welding shop in Dwight. Brian was the son of Christine's next door neighbours, Len and Cathy Talbot of Halls Lake. Brian was very well known and respected in the community and his funeral was attended by many friends from all over the township. Christine has been asked to create a life sized silhouette of Brian using half inch thick steel. The sculpture will be embedded in some other type of steel or concrete as a memorial. The work will be erected at a site approved by the mayor of Huntsville and will be donated by the artist to the community of Dwight.

Christine is also planning to teach art classes in the very near future, to children and adults, in co-operation with the Algonquin Highlands Recreation Committee. Anyone interested should contact Christine at 489-1243.

Christine Carr and some of her work can be seen at the Haliburton Home and Vacation Show this coming May 31 through June 2.

Remembering mothers' mumisms

Hello again everyone, we've all nestled in for another meeting of the minds to see if we can once again join forces and remember all the happenings of last week.

We'll begin at last Thursday where we left off. We enjoyed having the fine china brought out to celebrate Mother's Treasure Tea. This was a program where family members were invited to come and bring special memorabilia to represent their Mother or childhood. We shared pleasant memories of the past over strawberry shortcake, with lots of loving memories, a good turnout of family and interesting stories. There were newspapers dated back as far as 1893, Afghans, hand painted cups and saucers, just to name a few. Friday, at happy hour, the Pickards livened up the afternoon with their upbeat music. Thanks to these dedicated volunteers who bring so much joy into our lives. Thanks to Pearl, Marj and Don also for helping out. Saturday brought out our bingo buffs and we hear there were a few winners.

Sunday was Mother's Day – a day to remember our loved ones – and there were quite a few special visitors in to see us. All the Mothers received candies, cards and flowers and lunchtime brought

SENIOR LEAGUE

News from Hyland Crest

a treat to everyone, a choice of strawberry, chocolate or butter-scotch sundaes. What a great way to end a perfect meal! Sunday afternoon we sat around and discussed "mumisms." This was much enjoyed and brought back many memories. A Mumism is what mothers used to say such as, "feed a cold, starve a fever" or "quit making that face or it will stay like that." Interesting isn't it? To end an otherwise perfect day, dietary staff again made a most delicious meal, serving ham, scalloped potatoes and boston cream pie. Thank you so much, we certainly appreciate your hard work.

Monday, Residents Council had its monthly meeting at which time the members sent their appreciation to Melinda and Peter for the new automatic opener installed on the smoking room door and the new blinds in the dining rooms.

Monday evening was movie night and we enjoyed Gene Kelly and Debbie Reynolds in an old favourite "Singing in the Rain." All who attended reported an enjoyable evening with old friends from movie land.

Pastor Dan Millard led us in a study of Psalms during our Chapel Service on Tuesday. We also enjoyed crafts once again with Dottie and Brenda in the afternoon, while downstairs Burt Bonnell and his wife led us in a sing-along. We only had one table of card players out this week, with Margaret Foote pairing with Margaret Besse to outplay Blanche Wright and Alice Sedgewick two games to one. Tuesday's are busy, and last week we had a Gentle Hands program, with Dorothea Lynch and Rene McGoldrick enjoying a body massage and aroma therapy accompanied by soothing music. The residents truly enjoy this one-on-one program, in fact we had it twice this week with Bea Britain, Germaine Levesque, Mary Robinson, Mildred Gartshore and Alice Rivers being the recipients.

That takes us to Wednesday and Pub Night with Gord Kidd and friends. The turnout was not as large as usual for some reason but all who attended enjoyed the evening. Ernie Hamilton was seen keeping time with the music and others couldn't help but follow his lead with a clap or a foot keeping time. Thank you also to Jim and Joan for helping out once again this week.

We enjoy our "Chicken Soup." This is for the soul, however, as we read an inspiring story which gives us all something to think about outside of the events of Hyland Crest. Once again we send one big thank you to all those who pitch in each week to lighten and enlighten our lives. There are so many of you we can't mention all, but you know who you are.

Hope you had a safe and enjoyable long weekend and we will tell you of our happenings again next week.
